“... Casting a poignant spell... the musicians proved themselves [to be] dynamically sensitive... they got unexpected vibrancy out of the work... The audience responded as generously to the orchestra as they did to Cho... It was delightful.”

“Pure sonic heaven... There’s something about an orchestra that big with 116 years of history behind it and immeasurable talent from end to end that send shivers down your spine... The audience inside Centennial Hall was fighting the urge to burst into applause every time the Warsaw Phil took a breath... [Kaspszyk] said that Cho is a rock star on the piano, and the South Korean pianist proved it.”

“[Cho] had a beautiful, delicate touch... [he] captured all the subtlety and passion of Beethoven’s music...I was blown away by how spectacular [the Warsaw Philharmonic] sounded.... In each piece, I was struck by how seamlessly the different musicians blended their rich, full sound together with each other.. [they] sounded superb.”
